

Julie – Therapy Journey (Clean Dialogue Format)

Session 1: The Diagnosis

Julie: I just got married... and now I have cancer.

Therapist: That's a lot to take in at once.

Julie: It doesn't feel real. I was supposed to start a new life.

Therapist: It sounds like everything changed very suddenly.

Julie: Yeah. One moment I was happy... and now this.

Session 2: Loss and Control

Julie: I also lost the baby.

Therapist: I'm so sorry. That's a huge loss.

Julie: I don't even know what to grieve first.

Therapist: You're holding multiple losses at once.

Julie: Yes... and I can't control any of it.

Session 3: Humor as Coping

Julie: People keep telling me to stay positive.

Therapist: How does that feel?

Julie: Annoying. Like I'm not allowed to feel bad.

Therapist: What do you actually feel?

Julie: Scared... but sometimes I joke about it.

Therapist: Humor can be a way to cope.

Session 4: Facing Reality

Therapist: What worries you the most right now?

Julie: That I might die.

Therapist: That's a very real fear.

Julie: I wasn't supposed to think about death at this age.

Therapist: It changes how you see everything.

Julie: Yeah... everything feels fragile now.

Session 5: Meaning and Connection

Therapist: What feels most important to you now?

Julie: My husband. Time with him.

Therapist: Being present with him matters.

Julie: Yes. I don't want to waste time being afraid all the time.

Session 6: Acceptance

Therapist: What does acceptance look like for you?

Julie: Not pretending everything is okay... but still living.

Therapist: Living alongside uncertainty.

Julie: Yes. I think that's what I need to learn.

Final Realization

Therapist: What has changed for you through this process?

Julie: I can't control what happens... but I can choose how I live.

Therapist: That's a powerful shift.

Julie: I want to live fully, even with fear.
